Remarks:

* About the latter part of 1862 this company was consolidated with Company F, same battalion, and the consolidated company subsequently became Captain King's Battery Georgia Light Artillery.

The 14th (also known as Montgomery's) Battalion Georgia Light Artillery was organized about May, 1862, with four companies, A to D. In October, 1862, two additional companies appear to have been organized by transfers from other companies of the battalion and reported as Companies F and G. Captain Wiggins' Battery Arkansas Light Artillery was temporarily attached to this battalion as Company E. The battalion appears to have been disbanded during the latter part of 1862, or the early part of 1863, and the companies afterward recognized as independent batteries.
